

Channing Cooke

Channing Cooke was born in a small town north of Boston. Dancing has been her passion since the age of three. Her background includes extraordinary dance instruction and numerous conventions and competitions. She was selected to compete on Fox Networks So You Think You Can Dance and was voted among the top twelve dancers. Moving forward with her career she chose Los Angeles as her base. Once there she was afforded the opportunity to work with major talents such as Rihanna, Jennifer Lopez, Florence and the Machine, Jessie J, Snow Patrol and Neil Patrick Harris. Channing has performed on the Oscars, MTV Video Music Awards, American Idol, The X factor, Dancing With The Stars, Two and a Half Men and The Ellen Degeneres Show to name a few. She then went on to travel the world, both performing and choreographing, for Shaping Sound contemporary dance company. Currently, she is traveling the country teaching young dancers on DanceMakers dance convention and also works as a Life Coach working one on one with dancers. Her greatest achievement would be to inspire young people with the love and ardor that she so embraces.
